

Clean Water

A few years ago, my wife and I went on a wonderful safari in Kenya. Seeing all the animals in the wild was on our bucket list especially my wife's as she volunteers at a wildlife way-station just about every Sunday to feed the animals.

But Kenya has another side and that is the lack of clean water. There is a 501(c)(3) organization that is doing something about it called Just One Africa. You can read more about it at this web site, <https://www.justoneafrica.org/clean-water/> and you can make a difference by donating.

I always worry about donated money going to where I think it is going. So I did some research on Just One Africa and found very positive results. The site I found it on was <https://greatnonprofits.org/organizations/view/just-one-africa-inc/>. So if you are going to donate this year for humanitarian, tax or any other reasons, Just One Africa seems like a very good organization to give to.